Dear Dr. Avioli:

I haven't forgotten you and have pending your request for further tests.

I very much appreciated the service you gave my stone and my body chemistry and your conclusions.

When Dr. Flance returns from his vacation and I return from mine we will review the matter.

Dr. Flance took a sample of my blood a few days ago and said that it was normal.

Kindest regards to you and your team.

Dear Mr. Miller:

I am returning herewith the 1823 half dollar, purportedly in copper, which you sent to me on February 28, 1964.

This coin is a counterfeit and not a trial piece. Its specific gravity is 8.7 which almost conforms to the average for copper and weighs 179 grains. The edge has some letters on it which are so defective as to be further indication of its falsity. As you know, the piece does not ring due to the crack in the planchet or due to the fact that it may have an interior of lead, zinc, or other cheap metals.

It was customary, in the early Federal period, to make counterfeits in copper and to wash them with silver before passing them.

I am sorry I haven't better news for you. Better luck next time.

Sincerely yours,

ERIC P. NEWMAN

July 29, 1976

Dear Mr. Newman:

I am writing to ask your help in connection with a book-length history of the Great Seal of the United States which the Historical Office now has under way.

We have read with great interest your article in the December 1966 Numismatist on the emblem-book origins of the Continental currency, as we too are concerned with similar origins for the Great Seal device (obverse and reverse) adopted in 1782.

As to the design of the reverse of the Great Seal, with the pyramid and eye, as shown on the back of the current $1 bill, the influence of the Continental $50 bill must be assumed. Has anything come up since you wrote your article to modify your attribution of the design of the $50 bill to Francis Hopkinson? We see no point in retracing your footsteps in this research, but want to be sure that you have not discovered anything new on the subject.

As to the design of the obverse of the Seal--the eagle displayed, with symbols of peace and war in its talons--we are inclined to think that it leans heavily on a Camerarius emblem which was outside the scope of your work: an eagle displayed, with a thunderbolt at the left talon and an olive branch at the right. But the eagle with such symbols occurred in other emblem books as well, e.g., Sir Henry Goodyere's Mirror of Majesty, and a different but possibly relevant treatment in Saavedra. You and your daughter obviously made a very thorough study of the emblem books. Did you happen to note any further examples of the eagle with symbols of peace and war which might be useful to us?

Mr. Eric P. Newman,
6450 Cecil Avenue,
St. Louis, Missouri 63105.

Any help which you can give us on these questions will be very much appreciated.

Dear Mr. Aandahl:

Your inquiry of July 29, 1976 with respect to the source of the Great Seal of the United States is at hand.

I have not done further research on the source of the emblems and mottoes since my prior publication other than the listing in EARLY PAPER MONEY OF AMERICA which was originally published in 1967 and with a revised edition in 1976 to be released in a few days.

I have never checked all of the emblem books for the emblems and mottoes which Francis Hopkinson submitted but I am sure that his ideas were adaptations of then existing emblems and mottoes. I definitely think you should recheck those sources for the prior material which Francis Hopkinson used for the $50 Continental bill.

As to the eagle with symbols of peace and war there should be a very extensive prior history not only in the emblem books but on coinage. You might contact Randolph Zander, P.O.Box 3013, Alexandria, Va. 22302, as to foreign coinage which contained an eagle holding various items in its talons. I have not worked on the source of the eagle design. As you know, the eagle symbol is on the coinage of Massachusetts of 1787/1788 and New York 1787, etc.

I assume you have all the material on the Seal of the United States which has been published previously, including work by Gaillard Hunt (1909), also 1892, David Bullowa (1938), Walter Tancza (1950) and correspondence between Folger & Snowden (1885). All of these were included in the American Numismatic Society library list.

If there is any further help I can give you, please let me hear from you.

Sincerely yours,

Your letter of September 4th, addressed to H. Meghrig & Sons, has been referred to us.

We have, here in the Museum, an extensive collection of early bank notes, but, unfortunately, do not have the note referred to of The Mohawk Bank of Schenectady, issued in 1850. The notes which we have of the Mohawk Bank are of an earlier period.

If you have been unable to locate this note through any of the dealers, we suggest that you write to Mr. Eric P. Newman, 6450 Cecil Avenue, St. Louis 5, Missouri. Gentlemen:

One of my friends, a Professor at Union College, Schenectady, is writing an early history of the College, with several chapters on Eliphalet Nott, the first President.

He has asked me if I could find for him a banknote which was issued by The Mohawk Bank of Schenectady, in 1855. He has given me the following information, and will you please advise me if by any chance you have such a note, or know where one may be in a private collection:

"Resolved that the cashier be requested to have the new $25.00 plate engraved on steel, with the portrait of Dr. Nott on the $10.00 according to a model presented to this board. The additional charge for Dr. Nott is $100.00"

-Minutes, Trustees, The Mohawk Bank, Schenectady, N. Y. 12 September 1855.

The Schenectady Reflector on 11 January 1856 reported the issuance of this Nott banknote.

If you can obtain no information on this banknote, do you think it would be worth while advertising in the Numismatist?

Very truly yours

Dear Mr. Abbott:

This is an amazing coincidence. I have, for the last six months, been trying to locate a copy of Eliphalet Nott's book entitled "Federal Money; Being a Sketch of the Money of Account of United America", published in Cooperstown, in 1797. (Evans No. 32603). Would it be possible that your professor friend knows of a copy I can read? Turn about is fair play.

I am glad to help anyone with numismatic research.

I do not have in my collection a $10 note issued by the Mohawk Bank of Schenectady. According to Hodges' Genuine Bank note Safeguard, there were two $10 notes issued by the bank, one containing a male portrait on the right hand side and one containing a male portrait on the left hand side. The latter was the newer issue and was counterfeited.

The $25 note referred to was never issued. I do not think it would be worth while to advertise in the Numismatist. There is a possibility that the note, or a counterfeit of it, might be in the Western Reserve Historical Society collection, in Cleveland. These notes were redeemed and, therefore, would be excessively rare in collections. The counterfeits might be found. I am enclosing the detail of the bank note so far as I can determine from the bank note lists in my library.

If there is anything further I can do, please let me know and I hope you will be able to find a copy of the Nott book for me to read.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Sir;

After reading your article in Museum Notes XI from the American Numismatic Society, I examined the specimen I have of the James II I/24th Real and find it to be the new die 4-C with this exception. The harp in my specimen has 6 strings instead of five as noted. The [illegible] seems to be from the punch used for your reverse A due to the spacing of the strings. I am sending along two foil impressions, they are not good. I do not wish to part with this coin, but would send it to you for your examination if you think this worth while.

Mr. Eric P. Newman, P.O. Box 14020, St. Louis, Missouri 63178

Dear Mr. Newman: When I met you yesterday in the American Numismatic Society building I became a touch superstitious. You might agree that it was quite a coincidence that I was at the moment you walked in studying one of your previous gifts to the Society. Maybe it was also an omen for me and the work I am doing now.

I'm not much of a collector, though I have a very few notes and coins from Central Asia. In reality, I am what they call a cultural historian focusing upon Central Asia, mainly in the twentieth century, less in the earlier periods.

Now, I concentrate upon the period 1917-1925 in the Soviet sector of Central Asia, especially the main centers like Bukhara, Samarkand, Khiva (Khwarazm), Tashkent, Khokand (Kokan/Qoqan) in those years. Also, I have an interest in Both Afghanistan, 1919-29, and Chinese Turkistan, primarily Kashgar, Khotan, Urumchi, Turpan/Turfan in the 1900s up to 1949.

Right now, I'm interested in seeing and even acquiring the notes and coins from the 1917-25 period in Russian Central Asia, the cities I mentioned above. I hope to complete a study of these for my historical purposes, which are not essentially numismatic in motivation but might add a little to that discipline as well if I'm diligent enough.

Your advice and encouragement in this (new for me) approach to the cultural history of modern Central Asia will be appreciated greatly.

Sincerely, Edward Allworth, Head of the Center

Dear Mr. Newman,

I read, with interest, the article in the March 6, 1981 Globe Democrat about the museum, and of your long term as a collector of coin and paper currency. You are to be congratulated on your achievement.

I am enclosing a sketch of a small bill which we thought might be rare enough to warrent your interest. It is the only piece of fractional currency I have ever seen. It has been shown to student groups (I am a retired teacher) and always brought discussion from them — as to the time it was issued. The sketch is at least 1/3 large than the actual bill which is 1 3/4" x 3". It is green and ivory in color — much like present day paper money.

If you are interested in obtaining this piece for your museum we will be glad to hear from you

Mr. Eric P. Newman
Dear Sir:

I have just finished your elaborate article on "Fugio cents, revised 1952,which was very exciting and intresting. The field of Colonial coinage was not too impressive to me, until I purchasedan odd lot of coins and found a Massachusetts half cent, a Nova Costellatio cent and a copper Fugio cent 1787 with considerable mint lusture, or in this case contractor newness.

Your very well written history on this subject, indicates coinage of this period, was let to Contractors because United States mints did not exist prior to 1793.

I am an employee of Whitman Publishing Co. of Racine, Wis., who also have R.S.Yeoman, (Author) on their roster; from Dick I obtained your address. "Dick" has seen my Fugio cent and has two in his collection; he likes this coin. During our discussion of coins in general,we were agreed that coins should be held ten years to receive maximum benifits from them.

Idid not study Crosby's works, which I am sure would be confusing, so I will attempt to classify this coin according to your pattern for obverse and reverse.

I would like to begin with the reverse which seems to be less confussing, at least to me. Your "FF" plate design matches perfectly, including a small die break in link #8 near the left edge. Now here are other indentifications:

Ma terial, Copper.
United left, States right.
Cinquefoils top and bottom, of band.
Bottom cinquefoil breaks band.
Large "WE ARE ONE".
"W" in WE breaks band and touches "D" in UNITED.
"E" in ONE breaks band and touches "E" in STATES.
Second "S" in STATES breaks band.
Clock position of Cinquefoils were not recorded as cut "FF" matches.

Obverse indentifications:
Club Rays, Concave Ends.
Pointed Chin; more like plate 103.
Slightly off center, narrow border at top.
DATE:
8 has broken top.
Second 7 has divided upright.
Incused ornaments between Roman numerals.
Die break from lower circle of 8 to rim, just touching top left edge of 7. This seems like a cut on the die because the line is very straight.
Die break from lower third part of "F" in Fugio to lower base of Sun Dial, break is not straight and follows edge of #1 Cinquefoil then to base. This is more like a natural die break.
"Design worked into background of dial."
CINQUEFOIL POSITIONS:
#1 M-6
#2 H-5½
#3 L-1½
#4 L-1½
To locate these positions, I drew a clock dial and placed each Cinquefoil in the center thereof.
The lower third of "I" in BUSINESS is struck weak as your photo of plate 104 shows, also the same die break is apparent, from the base of Style or Gonomon to design directly below.

Now here is an intreging problem, and I hope I have stirred your curosity as this coin has mine. You asked for additional information regarding die varities, and maybe I have added something not known before.
I would like to display this token at one of our coin club meetings, but like additional information to better acquaint me with this item. "Can you answer the following:
Who owns these dies at present.
Where are they located.
Who authorized restrikes or patterns.
Do you know quanity of restrikes or patterns.
Are these dies in condition for present day restrikes and do you think they will.
You may refer this letter to F.C.C.BOYD P.O. Box 153 Ringoes, N.J. Communations may be addressed to R.S.YEOMAN, 1220 Mound Ave. Racine, Wisconsin, or to the writer and owner. I rest my case.

Dear Evelyn & Eric,

I want to wish you both a very Happy Chanukah.

Warmest wishes
as you celebrate the Festival of Lights

This month has been unusually slow at the hospital - Thanksgiving Day especially. It's nice to have a break every now & then.

No word on the bank rates - I'm still waiting.

Have a very Happy 1993 - may it bring much health + happiness. Fondly, Stael

Dear Sibel:

It was so pleasant talking to you and we hope you are well on the way to full adjustment.

You indicated you had a friend in Turkey who might get Mrs. Hill and myself some currency. We are sending a holder for you to send to Turkey so that the items will not be damaged in the mail. We would like the notes in new, crisp, unfolded, clean condition, which any bank ought to have available. We would like one note of 100,000 liras and two notes of 250,000 liras. We will send the money to your friend either in a U.S. check or a check payable in Turkish currency, whichever is more convenient. We could send it anywhere your friend wants it. There is no need to register or insure the shipment of the notes, as they can be sent by regular Air Mail.

The 250,000 lira note has just been issued.

We will be very grateful for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

Eric P. Newman
